

Dispatch from Thursday the 14th 2013: Travel to the South Island

We wake up early in the morning and drove to the ferryboat station under the sunrise. It took us about 30 minutes to get to the station and when we got there we got to play some hacky soccer while the ferryboat was getting ready to embark the passengers. When we got in, most of us headed to the top floor of the ferry to admire the Cook Strait and the landscape and take pictures. We then headed to the 2nd floor to get breakfast. From there, some of us went to take a nap while most of us headed to the “bar” section of the ferry to work on our journal/group research and have talks.

We arrived to Westport after nearly a 4 hours boat ride and headed to our hostel. The hostel was very welcoming and comfy place: we had a grill at our disposition, as well as a poolroom and a movie rom. On top of that, we were all given 500 mb of free internet. We went to play soccer for a little while then got ready to go out for the night. We walked to a bar/restaurant where we had diner and drinks.

Back to the hostel, some of us watched a movie (Chris Tucker most die) while most of us were in the poolroom, listening to music and playing pool.
