

Day 11

5-28-15

Day 11 began in Copenhagen, the capital city of Denmark, at the Danhostel Copenhagen Amager.

Danhostel Copenhagen Amager

After departing the hostel at 8:30am on the way to Bremen, Germany, we paused at a Bilka Grocery Store in order to eat breakfast at about 10am.

The Bilka had a bakery and cafe area just for people dining in.

The country of Denmark contains a large archipelago and the capital of Copenhagen is actually on an island, we crossed several bridges on the way to Bremen.

Map of Denmark

After eating at Bilka we needed to cross from Sjaelland into Fyn. To this end, we crossed a vast bridge kilometers long between the islands.

In the distance you can see the bridge.

The bridge was extremely large, this picture was actually taken over the water.

Denmark is full of coastal areas, the pictures below were taken immediately after we arrived on the Island of Fyn.

The Danes love their wind turbines, we counted 238 total while driving.

The countryside of Fyn.

The drive across Fyn took only about an hour, after that we crossed another bridge into Jutland, the peninsula that borders Germany where most of Denmark's land is.

The bridge onto Jutland and mainland Europe.

A field of Rapeseed, an important resource in making biofuels. We saw many views just like this one in Northern Europe. About an hour and a half after we crossed into Jutland, we entered Germany, one step closer to Bremen. While it did rain on us in Germany, the weather for our trip was very good overall.

About four hours after entering Germany we were in Bremen checking into the Southend Hostel Bremen at 6pm. The students and instructors dispersed to eat dinner and explore the city a little bit before bed.

The Bremen Southend Hostel

A view of the Weser River in Bremen, Germany.